FREN 872: French Novel of the 18th Century Professor Allan H. Pasco

An advanced course concentrating on major French novels of the 18th century as literature and as cultural artifacts. While the emphasis will be on the meaning(s) which can be elicited from the works through intensive analysis making use of appropriate methodologies, students will be encouraged to develop their own skills and to relate the results of their analyses to the currents of 18th-century thought and history, to the changes which the century wrought in the novel as a literary genre, and to the impact of such insights, interpretations, and traditions on theory of the novel.

Language: The course will be conducted in French, though adjustments can be made for students in disciplines outside the department. Required texts (all texts will be ordered through the KU bookstore, though students may wish to save money by procuring them in France): It is important that we all have the same versions.

(Each student will read an additional novel, chosen in conjunction with the professor, which will serve as the subject of a 20 page term paper.)

- Choderlos de Laclos Liaisons dangereuses (1782) Livre de poche ISBN : 2-253-00401-4
- Bernardin de St-Pierre Paul et Virginie (1787) Garnier-Flammarion no. 87 ISBN 2-08-070087-1